February 2015 Chair's Message

While I was unable to make the last meeting due to business travels, from reading the reviews and comments on the meeting surveys it looks like presentation was as well received as the previous time we heard from Jim Dill. Hopefully those in attendance have been spreading the tidbits they learned to help other improve their safety in regards to the social networking environment.

We have also taken note of the comments in regards to scheduling more company or factory tours. I wanted to let you know our Programs staff is always looking for facility tours but it isn't the simplest activity to coordinate from a cold call. Please consider helping us with those arrangements as having a person who works for the facility helps.

This month we look forward to hearing about taking teamwork to another level from Mike Greene of IntegrityWorks so I hope to see you there.

Brian Davis, Chair ASQ Section 503

What: Teamwork – the leverage of synergy

“None of us is as good as all of us.” – Ray Croc

One key to success is to engage individuals to think team first, leverage individual strengths, embrace and value the differences in others and ultimately reach team synergy. What is synergy? What is engagement? How do we achieve either? Why does it matter? Studies have shown that less than 1 out of 8 workers is truly engaged at the office. What impact does that have on business success? Imagine that statistic applied in families and other key teams we experience in our lives. Synergy leverages team success, but cannot be achieved without effective engagement. Learn why and how to cultivate engagement, and ultimately build successful team victories in business and life. This is how the great sports teams, companies and families have thrived over the years.
